GREEN PLEDGES A. F. OF L. BACKING FOR STRIKE BUT DENIES PLANS FOR GENERAL U. S. WALKOUT

U. S. FIRM'S LINK WITH NAVY MAN SEEN IN ACCOUNT

George V Blocked Americans' Sale in Poland in Behalf of English Bidders, Investigators Are Informed.

AMERICAN WARSHIP USED AS SHOWROOM

New York Company Said To Have Maintained Brokerage Account for Advisor to Colombia.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—(AP)—King George V of England and the United States war department were portrayed before the senate committee today as competing salesmen in an attempt to stop the sale of guns to Poland by a New York firm.

There were gasps of amazement from a little group of spectators when the committee was told that England's ruler, in 1932, personally intervened in an attempt to stop the sale of guns to Poland by a New York firm.

The war department, it was testified previously, had actively aided the Driggs Ordnance Engineering Company, of New York, in its efforts to sell the Polish government weapons that deal death.

Testimony portraying the English king as an armament salesman almost overshadowed other startling developments uncovered during the day's rapid-fire hearing, the last until Monday. Among them were:

Naval Sample Case.
Photographs showing Turkish officials aboard the U. S. S. Raleigh in 1929 to inspect armaments made by the Driggs company, an exhibition termed by Chairman Nye, republican, North Dakota, of the committee, as "use of the United States navy as a salesman's sample case."

Evidence that Lieutenant Commander James H. Strong, since resigned, while on active duty with the navy had helped Colombia prepare plans for defending its ports against possible Peruvian attacks.

Evidence that the American armament corporation of New York, maintained a brokerage account for Strong while he was acting as a naval adviser to the Colombian government in 1933.

An assertion by Senator Bone, democrat, Washington, that Sir Basil Zaharoff, European arms salesman, "is the greatest contributor to mass murder in the world."

Planes Sold to Japan.
Testimony that the American Armament Corporation had sold three of the most modern type of powerful Lockheed airplanes to the Japanese navy, a statement that drew from Senator Bone the remark that news papers on the west coast were saying "That one of these days Japanese planes will fly the Great Circle route and bomb our Puget sound cities off the map."

BRITISH MAY INITIATE ARMAMENT INVESTIGATION.
LONDON, Sept. 7.—(AP)—A move to launch an arms inquiry in Great Britain similar to that being held here.

Long Loses Two Court Decisions While Troops 'Take' New Orleans

At the call of Senator Huey P. Long, national guardsmen swarmed on New Orleans in obedience to his decree for ridding the city of "vice and corruption" and guaranteeing "a pure and peaceful" primary election September 14. The "kingfish" is shown with his bodyguard of soldiers as he went about directing his army of invasion by virtue of dictatorial powers conferred on him by the Louisiana legislature. Mayor T. Semmes Walmesley, bitter enemy of the "dictator," recruited a force of 1,500 policemen and vowed he would stand by his guns as administrative head of the city. (Associated Press photo.)

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Used yesterday by Judge Michel Probst, of civil district court, prohibiting the naming of extra election commissioners and special officers by the parish board of election supervisors for the election.

The telegram advised Louisiana's dictator that if any harm or injury came to young St. Amant "as a result of this mad effort of yours either by accident or otherwise, I will personally kill you as I would any other mad dog."

FATHER THREATENS TO KILL HUEY LONG.
BATON ROUGE, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Alfred D. St. Amant, local attorney, was so incensed when his son was drafted for duty in Senator Huey Long's "army of occupation" in New Orleans that he sent the "kingfish" a wire threatening to kill him if anything happened to the youth.

The telegram advised Louisiana's dictator that if any harm or injury came to young St. Amant "as a result of this mad effort of yours either by accident or otherwise, I will personally kill you as I would any other mad dog."

ROME WILL HEAR TALMADGE TODAY.
Big Crowd Expected in Floyd for Next to Last Address of Campaign.

Governor Eugene Talmadge will make his final campaign appearance in northwest Georgia and the next to the final speech of his re-election drive at 3 o'clock this afternoon at Rome before a crowd which is expected to include supporters of the governor from every county in the seventh congressional district.

The governor, who remained in Atlanta Friday looking after "business of his office," will go to Rome at noon today and return here immediately after the address.

SEVEN MEN KILLED AS BOILER BURSTS IN PIKE COUNTY

Explosion Occurs as Plans Are Made To Gin Season's First Cotton Bale at Neal.

CONCORD, Ga., Sept. 7.—Seven persons, four white men and three negroes, were killed this afternoon at 5 o'clock when a boiler at a cotton gin at Neal, near here, in Pike county, exploded.

The dead are Wilbur Riggins, and his cousin, Lawson Riggins, Amos McCard and Roger Evans, all white men. The negroes were Frank Caldwell and his brother, John Caldwell, and George Collier Jr. A negro named Gates, who was on the outside of the building, was slightly injured.

The Riggins men and Evans were spectators and McCard and two of the negroes were employees of the gin, it is said.

All of the men killed were in the boiler room where the engine had been fired up in preparation for ginning the season's first bale of cotton brought to the plant. Without warning the explosion occurred, killing five of the men instantly and two were so severely injured that they died before medical aid could reach them.

The boiler room was completely razed and the entire building wrecked. Some of the bodies were mutilated beyond recognition, having been hurled through the air a distance of 60 feet.

The Riggins men and Evans, a youth, were single. McCard was married and leaves a family. The bodies were removed to the funeral home at H. F. Strickland & Company, local undertakers. Funeral plans have not been announced.

The gin is owned by the Neal Gin Company and C. F. Crawford is foreman. He narrowly escaped death in the explosion because he had just left the building to talk to W. H. Williams, cotton factor, of Atlanta, who had stopped at the gin after visiting his farm near here.

Neal is a town of about 30 people and is situated on the Southern railroad that extends from Atlanta to Columbus.

ATLANTA MAN WITNESSES GIN EXPLOSION AT NEAL.
W. H. Williams, of 753 West Peachtree street, cotton factor, returned to his home last night after having witnessed the explosion of the gin plant at Neal Friday afternoon.

"I left Atlanta Friday afternoon at 11 o'clock," Mr. Williams said, "to visit my farm in Pike county near Neal and as I was ready to leave Neal I stopped near the gin to talk to C. F. Crawford, Mr. Crawford and I were within 25 feet of the building when the terrific explosion occurred. The building, which is of corrugated iron, did not collapse on the side where we were talking, and being on the opposite side of the building from the boiler room, we escaped injury."

The boiler room was in all directions, some of the bodies being blown as far as 60 feet."

Three Plead Guilty To Aiding Dillinger.
CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Pleas of guilty were entered today by two defendants on the side where we were talking, and being on the opposite side of the building from the boiler room, we escaped injury.

The third to plead guilty was Arthur W. O'Leary, young attorney employed by Piquett. Piquett's trial was set for September 17.

The three testified yesterday before the federal grand jury which returned the indictments against them and are expected to be government witnesses against Piquett.

Special Board Opens Peace Negotiations

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—(AP)—The Roosevelt textile strike peace board—Governor John G. Winant, of New Hampshire; Marion Smith, Atlanta attorney, and Raymond V. Ingersoll, borough president of Brooklyn—lost no time today in holding its first meeting. Procedure was outlined and Francis Gorman, strike head, and George Sloan, manufacturers' spokesmen, were called by telephone.

Gorman told newsmen as he left the afternoon meeting with the board that there had been "no mention of arbitration." A second meeting was arranged for tomorrow morning, the strike leader explaining, "we did not finish the presentation of our case."

There has been, he said, no suggestion of a joint meeting.

With his associates, Gorman went at once from the board meeting to confer with Secretary Perkins and later with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

He made it plain that co-operation with the board by no means meant an end of the strike. He reiterated his previous assertions that the walkout would continue—at least until the board has made its report.

Gorman was accompanied to the labor department, where the board was hastily installed, by Emil Rieve and Abraham Binns, both members of the general strike committee. They told the board that primarily the union asked:

PERKINS BLAMES LOCAL OFFICIALS IN KILLING OF SIX

Textile Strikers Increase Numbers to 370,000 But No Further Serious Disorders Are Reported in Industrial Conflict.

MEDIATION BOARD OPENS HEARINGS

Secretary of Labor Scores Honea Path Authorities for Using Non-Striking Workers as Deputies.

By the Associated Press.

The possibility of a general strike developing from the general textile walkout was dissipated Friday by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, who said such a move was "not even under consideration."

As Green made his statement, Secretary Perkins blamed local authorities for the death of six strikers yesterday at Honea Path, S. C., asserting their action in deputizing non-striking workers—unaccustomed to police duty—as mill guards was responsible for the bloodshed.

Green, who called representatives of 108 international unions to a meeting early next week for a discussion of ways and means of buttressing the textile workers' strike, began his remarks by blaming the workers' deputies for arming the workers.

"So far as I and the American Federation of Labor are concerned, we will do everything we can to place the blame and bring the guilty parties to justice—they must have known that those armed workers would shoot to kill."

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt's special mediation board, acting swiftly to reach a settlement of the nationwide textile strike, began hearing labor's contentions Friday while the president of the cotton textile institute, George A. Sloan, hurried to Washington to present his side of the case.

Union organizers concentrated "flying squadrons" activities in New England, but in no other section were there few disorders or casualties.

LABOR WILL MOBILIZE
WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—(AP)—A general mobilization of the forces and resources of organized labor behind the still-growing textile strike was ordered today while a presidential board sought to restore peace to conflict-ridden mill towns.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, called representatives of 108 international unions to a meeting early next week for a discussion of means of buttressing the textile workers' strike. He denied a general strike was "even under consideration."

Meanwhile, Secretary Perkins blamed local authorities for the death of six strikers yesterday at Honea Path, S. C. She asserted their action in deputizing non-striking workers—unaccustomed to police duty—as mill guards was responsible for the bloodshed.

Green said he believed those responsible for arming the worker-deputies were "guilty of murder," adding: "So far as I and the American Federation of Labor are concerned, we will do everything we can to place the blame and bring the guilty parties to justice—they must have known that those armed workers would shoot to kill."

MYERS DESCRIBES FULTON BAG DOORS DEATH OF CO-ED CLOSED BY STRIKE

Young Student Details Picketing Brings Shut-down; Demonstration Quiet; Rome Mill Closed

THE FULTON BAG and Cotton Mills, largest textile plant in the Atlanta area, closed its doors Friday at 2 o'clock, joining the list of similar factories which have stopped operations because of the national strike called by the United Textile Workers of America.

In posting its notice of shutdown, the Fulton Bag stated that the mills would close at 2 p. m. Friday "to avoid any physical violence or conflict caused by forces beyond our control."

It was further announced that overseers would be available all next week to attend to personal matters for employees.

Prior to the announcement the plant

ATLANTA WOMAN FOUND DEAD IN TUB

Miss Dorothy Roberts Leaves Rambling Note; Hyde's Body Discovered.

The body of a woman, identified by Coroner Paul Donehoo as Miss Dorothy Roberts, daughter of Mrs. Minnie Roberts, of 2555 Peachtree road, and member of a prominent Atlanta family, was found in a water-filled bathtub in a downtown hotel late Friday afternoon.

Another suicide, P. E. Hyde, Atlanta businessman, missing from his home for two days, was revealed Friday when Hyde's dead body was found in his light delivery truck parked at Nancy Creek church, just north of Oglethorpe.

A chambermaid, alarmed when she was unable to open the hotel room door where Miss Roberts' body was found with a passkey, notified the manager of the hotel, who broke into the room and found the dead body, clothed only in underwear, in the tub. The state of the body revealed, according to Coroner Donehoo, that she had died in the bathtub.

RUSSIA OPPOSED ON LEAGUE ENTRY

Poland, Portugal and Argentina Still Decline To Favor Admission.

GENEVA, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Louis Barthou, French foreign minister, today failed to persuade Poland, Portugal and Argentina to support Russia's admission to the League of Nations.

He spent the day conferring with delegates representing those nations, the most potent opponents of the Russian candidacy, but admitted afterwards that further negotiations would be necessary.

Portugal's affirmative vote is regarded as vital, inasmuch as France, England and Italy, the triumvirate backing Moscow's cause, are anxious to place the soviet permanently on the League council, for which Portugal's assent, by virtue of her council membership, would be necessary.

It was learned that authorities at Lisbon are so opposed to communism that in exchange for Portugal's adherence to the Russian cause they must have assurances that there will be no communistic propaganda in the Iberian country.

Poland was described as demanding that Russia accept obligations respecting racial minorities just as Poland, and the Warsaw government, at present a semi-permanent member of the council, is reported talking of a permanent seat.

It was understood, in backing Barthou in his efforts to induce Argentina to support Russia's entry without reservations.

Lupescu Said Urging Carol To Return to His Wife's Side.
VIENNA, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Rumania's famed "red-headed woman" tonight was reported ready to retire from the spotlight.

Diplomatic quarters here heard that Mme. Magda Lupescu, titian-haired beauty for whom Prince Carol once forewore his throne, was urging Carol to seek reconciliation with Princess Helen, his former wife.

King Carol's friend, the reports said, recommended the reconciliation as the best way to silence growing criticism of Carol.

DIXIE MILLS DEFY FLYING SQUADRONS

Many Plants Reopened Despite Threat of Strike Violence.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Sept. 7.—(AP)—The threat of martial law was impeding against scenes of strike and disorder in strike-torn Piedmont South Carolina as fresh troops were rushed into the area already dotted with the pitched camps of 25 military units.

Proclamation was issued at the office of Governor Ibra C. Blackwood in Columbia, commanding "all persons engaged in or taking part in any unlawful obstruction, combination or assembly" to return to their homes before noon tomorrow.

This edict was regarded as an ultimatum to the strike sector on whose battlefronts in South Carolina seven men have been killed since the general textile strike went into effect, as the governor for the past 24 hours has been "seriously considering" declaring martial law in the state.

The chief executive explained his proclamation was issued in conformity with a state statute requiring formal notice before instituting a declaration of martial law or state of insurrection.

"My proclamation of tonight is that notice," the governor said.

Governor Blackwood explained the chief difference between a state of insurrection and martial law was technical. Under a state of insurrection declaration, he said, civil authorities are still in charge, but troops are at their disposal, habeas corpus is suspended and authorities are empowered to commandeer any resources necessary to their work, as under martial law.

"I may or may not declare a state of insurrection," the governor said, adding that if he did, the area to which the declaration would apply had not been designated.

The development came tonight as Southern textile manufacturers, aided by national guardsmen, took a counter-offensive against unionists, reopening their plants in several towns while strike "flying squadrons" rested from their relentless march.

Approximately a score of mills reopened behind menacing rows of bayonets in the Carolinas, and one started up in Alabama with the aid of officers.

In addition, guardsmen and thousands of special officers patrolled the properties of mills which had fought off the demands of the flying squadrons that their employees come out.

Today's lull in picketing promised but a brief respite, however, as a United Textile Workers reorganized their forces to resume activities Monday after the week-end close-down. Most mills in this area do not operate on Saturday.

Virginians Not Idle. As the strike ended its first active week, independent surveys indicated the score was slightly in favor of the union which, however, had made no impression in Virginia. Washington dispatches said the union planned to remedy this, however, by organizing field workers for a concerted attempt to close the vast plants at Danville.

Best available figures after the rapid-fire of plant reopenings in the past two days indicated 70,000 of North Carolina's textile workers remained idle, out of 111,000 in all branches of the industry. Reopenings in South Carolina were fewer.

National guardsmen largely devoting their time to protecting mills which were never completely closed. Reports indicated approximately 40,000 of that state's 65,000 workers were out.

Georgia reported 38,200 of 60,000 out; Alabama 15,000 of 38,000; Tennessee 4,000 of 25,000; Mississippi 800 of 4,700; Virginia none of 22,000; Maryland only 25 of 9,000; Oklahoma 550 of 700; and Texas 350 of 5,000. Florida, with only a handful of mills, was not affected.

Reply to Gorman. Governor Blackwood, replying to a reported assertion by Gorman that he had been "hostile" to strikers, revealed his life had been threatened in anonymous letters if he continued to use the troops, and that dynamiting of the executive mansion also had been threatened.

In a statement, the governor said in part: "The only governor who could enjoy the approval of Mr. Gorman would be one who would stand mutely by and suffer ruthless and insolent invasion of the state by individuals and groups bent upon illegal and destructive enterprises. I have endeavored, as every intelligent person acquainted with the facts knows, to avoid partisan feeling in this strike. I feel that I have been patient and almost indulgent in order that I may be always conscious of the fact that any innocent blood shed in this conflict shall not be upon my hands. This, however, is not enough. In order to have the approval of some of the promoters of this strike, the governor must not only abstain from violence and invasion of personal rights, but also interpret of innocence. This I cannot do."

"So long as it is my privilege and duty to be the governor of this state, I do not propose to withhold from helpless women and children, and innocent people who wish to work, the protection that should be extended them by the state."

He added he did not intend to see the state's "ideals trampled by a communist invasion."

Exhortations Reply. Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus, of North Carolina, telegraphed replies to his critics.

He told Paul Peters, chairman of the southern textile strike support committee, "I am not a strike supporter. I am a peace-loving citizen. I am a law-abiding citizen. I am a citizen of the state of North Carolina. I am a citizen of the United States of America. I am a citizen of the world."

About $450 was realized for Governor Eugene Talmadge's campaign fund Friday when six bales of cotton contributed by the governor's friends from widely-scattered sections of the state were auctioned off by Henry C. Davidson, president of the Fulton County Talmadge Club, to J. J. Williamson, of the Williamson Cotton Company, for 15 cents a pound.

The governor is shown above with the six bales and four prominent Treutlen county farmers who arrived with their gift just in time to include it in the action in the picture, from left to right, are W. C. Barwick, Homer Davis, Jim Fowler, Governor Talmadge and Chap Thigpen. Staff photo.

Georgia cotton reached 15 cents a pound in the open market Friday. At least some 3,000 pounds contributed to Governor Eugene Talmadge's campaign fund by a number of his farmer friends brought that price.

The 3,000 pounds, comprising six bales, was auctioned off to J. J. Williamson, of the Williamson Cotton Company, after spirited bidding on the part of about 10 cotton dealers. Henry C. Davidson, president of the Fulton County Talmadge Club, acted as auctioneer at the sale which was held in the governor's office at the capitol. Nearly 150 of the governor's friends were on hand to witness the auction.

The bidding started at 5 cents a pound, New York, one of the protesters, that he was not hostile to the strike; that guardsmen were being used to protect the right to work, and suggested "that you inform yourselves of the true situation in North Carolina before protesting."

Only one flying squadron was reported active in the Carolinas, which for three days had watched large motorcades roar through the countryside, closing mill after mill.

At a small plant near Shelby, guardsmen ordered a closedown. Mill officials refused and a force-out was promised at the next shift-changing time. Troops were called, but no violence resulted.

Practically all mills which operated in the principal textile areas did so behind national guard lines. Plants in many towns outside of the western sections of the two states have never been molested. The great textile concentration is in the Piedmont, an area 60 to 100 miles wide stretching from Greensboro, near the Virginia line, to Anderson near the Georgia line.

Summary of Situation. CHESTER, S. C.—Mills of the Springs chain operated full time, while an airplane circled over surrounding country, warning flying squadrons. Captain Elliott White Springs, author and owner of the chain, announced full strength devoted to remaining open as long as they were able to work. His plants at Lancaster and Kershaw continued operations, but one at Fort Mill was still closed. Two national guardsmen and many special officers were on guard.

LINCOLNTON — Rumors, later proved unfounded, that squadrons would seek to release 41 pickets arrested for trespass, caused heavy troop concentration.

AIKEN, S. C.—No trouble in Horse Creek Valley where 3,400 at work.

DURHAM, N. C.—Strike total reaches 6,500 with walkout of hosiery workers of Golden Bell Company.

SPINDALE, N. C.—All mills running under guard protection after day-closed. No disorder. One hundred and fifty troops on guard.

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C.—Four mills reopen under guard protection. Three remain closed. One thousand and two hundred working, 800 idle.

CHERRYVILLE, N. C. (Gaston County)—Seven plants announced plans to reopen without guard aid. All Gaston's 104 plants been closed since Monday.

KINGS MOUNTAIN, N. C.—Seven of 10 mills reopened. 200 guardsmen and officers aiding. All quiet. Few pickets.

HIGH SHOALS, N. C.—Employees notified seek employment elsewhere as plant has no reopening plans.

HIGH POINT, N. C.—Four mills closed by flying squadron reopen. Few guardsmen on guard.

NEGRO IN DALTON JAIL CHARGED WITH ATTACK DALTON, Ga., Sept. 7.—A negro who gave the name of George Russell, of Birmingham, Ala., has been placed in the Whitfield county jail by Sheriff Bryant charged with an attempted attack upon a white woman near here Thursday.

The negro, according to officers, was working on a railroad track several miles out from Dalton and accosted the woman and attempted to attack her. An approaching automobile frightened him and he ran, it is said. The woman gave the alarm and officers captured the negro several hours later.

150,000 WORKERS IDLE IN NEW ENGLAND AREA BOSTON, Sept. 7.—(AP)—The continued closure of textile mills went steadily forward in New England today and by nightfall the ranks of the idle stood close to 150,000.

In Massachusetts and in the heavily concentrated Blackstone valley area in Rhode Island, factories continued to shut their doors until the strike, which earlier in the week gripped such important centers as Fall River and New Bedford with a combined working population of 44,000. Manchester and Nashua, N. H., Burlington, Vt., and Holyoke, Mass., threatened to cause a virtual cessation of activity in the two states.

In Maine, Connecticut, Vermont and New Hampshire, however, there was little change in the existing situation.

The day saw a check of the activities of the flying squadron of textile workers from Fall River which heretofore had met with considerable success in closing mills.

It also was signaled by a statement by Governor Joseph B. Ely, of Massachusetts, in which he made it plain that "We want no bloodshed in Massachusetts."

Flying squadrons of strikers from Fall River, flushed by their success in closing every plant in that city of 22,000 textile workers, were excited as they sought to enter Lawrence, one of the largest woolen centers in the country, and quit Fitchburg after being told by police there that picketing would not be permitted.

A motorcade of more than 15 machines was halted at the Lawrence-Andover line in Shawsheen village, by a detachment of Lawrence and Andover police.

While City Marshal Charles Vose, of Lawrence, looked on, a towering police sergeant told the members of the motorcade to "Get the hell out."

Eventually all of the cars turned about and apparently headed away from Lawrence, although later 50 men from the Fall River contingent continued to reach the center of the town and picketed the city hall.

The situation in Lawrence, practically the only textile center of its importance in New England not to be affected by the strike, remained unchanged although the city turned out a large force of police to guard the city hall and the city hall.

All four of Griffin's textile plants remained in normal operation Friday with special deputies on guard against outside interference. Mill officials said. Machine guns were placed near the mills and tear gas was at hand. The situation was quiet at Macon, where the E. H. B. Manufacturing Company finally closed Wednesday after riotous clashes and at Trion where two men were killed in a fight that same day.

Funeral services were planned there Sunday at the city stadium for Carroll. There was no trouble as the strike spread.

BASELESS FEAR

In a calm and studious review of what the New Deal has accomplished in the rehabilitation of trade and commerce and the steady financial conditions, Secretary of Commerce Roper, in an address delivered this week in Birmingham, cites that the chief handicap now faced by the recovery program is the fact that psychological recovery is lagging behind actual recovery in business and industry.

Quoting from the warning in the inaugural address of President Roosevelt 18 months ago that "the only thing we have to fear is fear itself—nameless, unreasoning, unjustified terror which paralyzes needed efforts to convert retreat into advance," Mr. Roper points out that—

Without doubt, our nation has already paid behind it that zero hour of "nameless terror" which gripped the masses of our people as we sank deeper into the quicksands of economic disaster in the early spring of 1932. In a year and a half our economic gains have been greater than the corresponding losses of the year and a half preceding March 4, 1933, a condition never before recorded in our history.

Previously the downward cycle in the final stages of depression has always measured greater in losses than the gains in a corresponding period of time after recovery has set in. Yet, notwithstanding this highly encouraging factor, we are still faced with the fact that the greatest "thing we have to fear is fear itself."

Secretary Roper gives a brief summary of "domestic gains illustrative of the improvement in the last 18 months," among which he includes an increase of 4,120,000 in employment and of 8.5 per cent in weekly wages, an average reduction of six hours in the work week for all industry, a substantial increase in corporation profits, the strengthening of the financial and credit structure, and the relief extended to distressed home and farm owners.

The greatest beneficial effect on the southland of the New Deal, the secretary tells the people of this section, is not expressible in figures, as it lies "in the revival in faith, energy and initiative found in every locality and shown in the countenance and the attitude of the people."

Secretary Roper answers the charges of socialistic tendencies that have been made against the Roosevelt administration by stressing that—

The New Deal does not mean the complete replacement of the old order of business and economics by an entirely new order. It seeks to eliminate those elements of our economic and social life which have proven to be unsuccessful and undesirable.

We can feel confident that the hopes of state socialism, the elimination of just and equitable private profits, and the strangling of individual initiative are untenable conclusions. Because the unprecedented severity and effects of the depression required the federal government to enter actively into many fields of endeavor, taking over temporarily local responsibilities in order to prevent human suffering and want, we must not conclude that the federal government plans or desires to continue this one day longer than necessary. On the contrary, the federal government wishes to give back to business and industry as rapidly as possible those responsibilities which it has been forced to assume during this critical period. . . . We must only remember that after years of maladjustment, it will necessarily require, in many instances, considerable time in which to establish the desired balance in relationships.

Secretary Roper's thoughtful, factual address should serve an excellent purpose in strengthening confidence and convincing those who are still fearful, that there is no ground for their uncertainty as to the future.

Of greater significance and importance is his unqualified denial of the charges that American business

Rest A While!
You know how I have more than once insisted in this place on the sanctity of the Lord's Day and how I have sometimes even idealized it by telling you stories of how the old man home town observed the Sabbath and how beautiful they made that day, so that even today the perfume of reminiscence lingers with me. Hear this story today from the great book of Professor Martin Buber called "The Legend of the Sabbath." In the depths of a Carpathian mountain, in a Jewish village, there lived a simple man, but he worked hard all his life, but every day, so that even today the perfume of reminiscence lingers with me. Hear this story today from the great book of Professor Martin Buber called "The Legend of the Sabbath." THE RED CROSS MEETINGS.

In order that the members of the Red Cross in Georgia, and especially chapter and district chairmen, may be fully posted on the plans for the annual roll call in November, conferences will be held this month in each of the 15 districts into which the state has been divided in order to systematize the campaign to secure memberships when the fall drive gets under way.

The meetings will be held in the home towns of the chairmen of the 15 districts, and will be attended by a group of officials and workers in the national organization headed by Carl Hunt, assistant manager for the eastern area. The first meeting is scheduled for Dalton on September 17 and other meetings have already been arranged to last through September 22, all of which will be attended by the party of officials, as well as representatives from the various counties in the districts in which the conference will be held. Hatton Lovejoy, of LaGrange, is chairman of the Atlanta district and the district meeting will be held in that city at 9:30 a. m. on September 18.

The date for the roll call, held each year between Armistice Day and Thanksgiving, is still some time off, but it is hoped by getting an early start in the preparations for the drive that this year's receipts will set a new high mark.

The systematic manner in which the officials, both state and national, of the Red Cross are getting ready for the drive should arouse the members of the various chapters in Georgia to a greater degree of activity than has ever before been the case. The meetings to be held during the latter part of this month should be attended by representatives of every chapter in the state. It will assure not only that the task of conducting the roll call will be made easier, but that a full response will be received.

MRS. PINCHOT FOR GOVERNOR.

Decision of Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the present governor of Pennsylvania, whose term expires on January 1, to offer to succeed her husband, brings into the limelight a woman who has been credited with inspiring many of the progressive tendencies that have made her mate a stormy petrel in the politics of this state.

Although possessed of a large fortune, Mrs. Pinchot has evidenced in the past in her not infrequent utterances a disinclination to acquiesce in the reactionary policies of the republican party, of which both she and her husband are members. They supported Theodore Roosevelt, as they are now supporting the New Deal, and have been the only Pennsylvanians in a quarter of a century or more able to defeat the strong republican machine of that state, both from within and without.

With Mrs. Pinchot's announcement of her candidacy for governor, Pennsylvania has a condition similar to that in Texas, where "Pa" and "Ma" Ferguson have kept politics heated for many years. Her announcement as an independent seems certain to split the republican votes, and her candidacy further complicates matters by the appeal it undoubtedly has for the women voters of the state.

News Behind the News

BY PAUL MALLON.

HOSPITALITY WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—When the socialist-democrat Upton Sinclair met Republican Chairman Fletcher inadvertently here the other day, he smiled at Fletcher and said, in an offhand way: "Well, I guess we may be at each other's throats at any time now."

The diplomatic Fletcher eyed Sinclair's throat and said undiplomatically: "Any time."

There was many a New Dealer who would like to have said that, but couldn't. In fact, the New Dealers welcomed their unwelcome guest with such cordiality that it must have seemed just a little strange to him. If he had come to Washington before he won the democratic gubernatorial nomination in California, he would not have been able to get in to see an office boy in the New Deal.

As it was, he saw nearly everyone, without waiting, was everywhere given the glad hand and, to all surface appearances, was a big hit.

OIL The reason for that was well known to Sinclair and to the New Dealers, but to no one else.

When he invited himself to Hyde Park and remained two hours with the president, he emerged with a list of names of the people he should see in Washington. Before Mr. Sinclair arrived here, the grapevine brought confidential advice to all government officials to receive him with open arms as a friend and not as a pest.

That was not hard for many of the New Dealers, as Mr. Sinclair is a very amiable fellow, a fast talker and quite clever on top of his feet. It was easy for such hosts as Harry Hopkins, who is just as clever as Sinclair and just as agile. For instance, Mr. Hopkins' attitude was: "Well, Upton, you can have anything you want."

But Mr. Hopkins neglected to add that Mr. Sinclair could not have $200,000,000 for his California program. They will take that up if Mr. Sinclair is elected.

Amiability may have been more of an effort for Jesse Jones, of the RFC, for another instance. Mr. Jones never before in his life saw a socialist, even a reformed one.

In fact, a majority of those upon whom Sinclair called appeared to take him as a brave man takes a cat. They knew what was behind themselves, and could not whimper, but that was no sign that they liked it.

SELF-HELP The truth is that one phase of the Hopkins relief program is based on almost exactly the same fundamental theory as Mr. Sinclair's epic plan. However, Mr. Hopkins is a realist and not a socialist. He has taken the realistic rather than the socialistic approach. Thus he has managed very quietly to put relief workers into self-reliance in every state of the Union, except Delaware.

California itself, the FERA has advanced $399,000 (a long way from $200,000,000, incidentally) to 160 co-operative groups, 116 of which are in Los Angeles county. These groups operate a lumber mill, cannery factory, clothing factory, fishing industry, sewing establishment, dairy, garage, printing shop, and what not. Goods thus produced are exchanged among the workers for other products.

In all states, such co-operatives have received $1,299,000. In addition, money has been loaned to states which carry on such co-operative self-work relief under their own auspices with federal funds. Ohio has developed this phase remarkably.

Mr. Hopkins would like to expand this basic idea to care for all the unemployed this winter. He is doing all he can to encourage such activity. But he knows very well the scheme has very definite political and economic limitations.

When the unemployed get to the point where they produce goods in competition with private industry, they throw out of work men who are already privately employed.

MORTGAGES Predicaments seem to come just as naturally to senators as high hats. There is a democrat in one now. The mortgage on his home has been shunted around in such a way that the HOLC now holds it. He is worried that the situation may become public, but there is no reason why he should be. His connection with the transaction appears to be fully legal now, although it was not at first.

The way it happened was this: A bank held a mortgage of $15,000 on the senator's house. He paid off $3,000 of it before the bank got into difficulties. Then the bank demanded $3,000 more under a reorganization scheme.

It seems that the bank owed him around $3,000 for legal fees. He declined to pay on his mortgage until the bank paid him. Finally the bank figured out by what whereby the mortgage was transferred to the HOLC. An application book was presented to him and he signed it. The HOLC then took over the mortgage which it holds today.

All this happened before congress slipped through that bill authorizing congressmen to get legal relief from government agencies. Therefore it may have been technically illegal, although the senator was not aware of it at the time.

NOTES The recent anti-socialist statement of Senator Hastings was issued by republican headquarters here, although it was really telephoned from Newport, R. I., by the senator. Apparently Hastings considered Bradley's Beach a bad date line for an anti-socialist statement.

Two letters have been received at democratic headquarters applying for the position of seal enumerator for Alaska, although no such job exists. It would be a nice long task to count the seals up there, but Patrons Dispenser Hurja passed it up because he figured it would be too damp.

Matters definitely have been patched up between Professor Moley and Louis Howe, and they are seeing eye-to-eye again. (Copyright, 1934, by Paul Mallon.)

HEALTH TALKS
BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY

THE LESSER THE BETTER.
The belief that a big fat person is strong is nearly obsolete now. Every one knows that as one grows fat one grows weaker. Following are a few facts which show how greatly a few pounds of excess weight handicaps the man training for a fight. But it does not follow that a fat person will grow stronger if he eats more food. He should be so, but it isn't so, or rather it has not been so under the various reduction methods that have been in vogue up to the present.

We have every reason now to believe that reduction achieved by a rational, scientific plan not only does not weaken the patient's strength or impair health or lower resiliency in any way but actually improves general well being and efficiency, as we should expect to do when we correct or adjust the numerous faults that account for the obesity.

I say that the various reduction regimens employed in the past have failed to provide an adequate basal nutrition and for that reason they have given little satisfaction to patient or physician or when they have been applied enthusiastically or persistently they have caused actual damage to health.

These old-time regimens for reducing not infrequently give rise to serious accidents in cases of persons who adhere too faithfully to the restrictions imposed. Another common ill consequence of such unwise old-time regimens is the state of flabbiness and a startling loss of elasticity of the skin. Still another grave result of restricted diet is one or another type of arthritis.

Here is an instance of avitaminosis "B":
Young woman, much overweight, followed for some time by a meager and monotonous diet. Presently she became short of breath, and complained of palpitation and developed some edematous (drooping) swellings in her legs. The doctors who then saw her thought the trouble was in the heart. The girl never had any illness that might have affected the heart, and had always been athletic and in excellent health. Finally an alert physician decided the symptoms were similar to those of beriberi, a disease of the various vitamins in nutrition and health we are forced to the conclusion that in all probability she was a victim of beriberi. Reduction regimens are suffering chiefly from one or another avitaminosis (lack of vitamins) and that intelligent administration of the necessary vitamins would quickly restore these victims of bad nutrition to health.

The truth is that the newer knowledge of nutrition is still a closed book to many good doctors, because the advances in this field have been made chiefly by research laboratory workers and it takes considerable time to translate their observations and deductions into practice. The doctor who achieves any success in dealing with metabolic or nutritional disorders is to grope his way forward step by step, and the latest research workers are in a position to suggest to him the direction of further advance.

The belief that a big fat person is strong is nearly obsolete now. Every one knows that as one grows fat one grows weaker. Following are a few facts which show how greatly a few pounds of excess weight handicaps the man training for a fight. But it does not follow that a fat person will grow stronger if he eats more food. He should be so, but it isn't so, or rather it has not been so under the various reduction methods that have been in vogue up to the present.

We have every reason now to believe that reduction achieved by a rational, scientific plan not only does not weaken the patient's strength or impair health or lower resiliency in any way but actually improves general well being and efficiency, as we should expect to do when we correct or adjust the numerous faults that account for the obesity.

I say that the various reduction regimens employed in the past have failed to provide an adequate basal nutrition and for that reason they have given little satisfaction to patient or physician or when they have been applied enthusiastically or persistently they have caused actual damage to health.

These old-time regimens for reducing not infrequently give rise to serious accidents in cases of persons who adhere too faithfully to the restrictions imposed. Another common ill consequence of such unwise old-time regimens is the state of flabbiness and a startling loss of elasticity of the skin. Still another grave result of restricted diet is one or another type of arthritis.

Here is an instance of avitaminosis "B":
Young woman, much overweight, followed for some time by a meager and monotonous diet. Presently she became short of breath, and complained of palpitation and developed some edematous (drooping) swellings in her legs. The doctors who then saw her thought the trouble was in the heart. The girl never had any illness that might have affected the heart, and had always been athletic and in excellent health. Finally an alert physician decided the symptoms were similar to those of beriberi, a disease of the various vitamins in nutrition and health we are forced to the conclusion that in all probability she was a victim of beriberi. Reduction regimens are suffering chiefly from one or another avitaminosis (lack of vitamins) and that intelligent administration of the necessary vitamins would quickly restore these victims of bad nutrition to health.

The truth is that the newer knowledge of nutrition is still a closed book to many good doctors, because the advances in this field have been made chiefly by research laboratory workers and it takes considerable time to translate their observations and deductions into practice. The doctor who achieves any success in dealing with metabolic or nutritional disorders is to grope his way forward step by step, and the latest research workers are in a position to suggest to him the direction of further advance.

ROME WILL HEAR

TALMADGE TODAY

The governor's two opponents, Judge Claude C. Pittman and Attorney General E. A. Tamm, also will be active today, the former having scheduled three speeches and the latter two.

Pittman at Stateboro.
Pittman will speak at 11 o'clock this morning at Stateboro, at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon at Louisville and at 7:30 tonight at Millersville.

Gilliam speaks at 11 o'clock this morning at Covington and at 3 o'clock this afternoon at Conyers.

Writing in the Statesman, a weekly paper, which he edits, Governor Tamm Friday called upon the voters to re-elect three of his appointees, Justice John B. Hutcheson, of the supreme court, and Chairman J. B. Wilhoit and Commissioner J. B. (Tobe) Daniel, of the public service commission.

In the same article the governor said that he would like to see the public service commission re-elected.

In his article the governor wrote: "This is the last issue of the Statesman before the election. I removed the five old members of the public service commission. I removed them for the reason that they were old and they were not doing the job. I hope that you will vote for Mr. Wilhoit and Mr. Daniel."

James A. Perry, one of the five old members of the Georgia public service commission who was re-elected, is now running for election to the Georgia House of Representatives. He is running against J. B. Wilhoit, one of the five new members appointed by me.

Mr. Wilhoit has been faithful to his trust, and helped to reduce the utility rates that have left over $10,000,000 per year in the pockets of the utility companies.

Walter McDonald was another of the old members of the public service commission who was in the same boat with Perry. He is running for election to the Georgia House of Representatives. He is running against J. B. Wilhoit, one of the five new members appointed by me.

On the death of Judge Warner Hill, of the supreme court, I appointed Judge John B. Hutcheson, judge of the Stone Mountain circuit. He is now running for an endorsement term. He is being opposed by Judge Felt, one of the old public service commissioners, who were holding on to the high rates of the utility companies and accepting passes from the corporations on whose rights he had to judge.

I was commissioner of agriculture for five and one-half years. Tommie Lee, my assistant practically all of that time.

He rendered me and also the people of Georgia valuable service.

When I went over to the governor's office, I carried Mr. Linder with me as executive secretary. Mr. Linder has worked harder than any man in the state capital.

Mr. Linder has many people called on him. Linder to run for commissioner of agriculture.

I tried to discourage Mr. Linder in making this race. The reason I did so was because I wanted him to remain with me as executive secretary.

Mr. Linder had the right, as every citizen in this state, to make this race for commissioner of agriculture.

I know Mr. Linder to be a hard worker, capable and honest, and having the interest of the farmers of Georgia at heart.

Timed "Afraid" Charge.
Headquarters for Judge Pittman here Friday issued a statement charging that Governor Talmadge is afraid to accept the judge's challenge to meet him on the stump.

"We are not surprised that Governor Talmadge will ignore Judge Pittman's challenge for debate, as Judge Pittman has repeatedly stated that he has made up his mind to accept the challenge."

Against the governor and his henchmen he stands ready to prove before the people of Georgia, the statement said. Governor Talmadge has repeatedly boasted of his courage, but he is unwilling to stand before the people of Georgia and have their charges read to his face because he knows that any audience in Georgia will be able to tell him on his face the undisputable fact that he is guilty of all that has been charged against him. He is afraid of his own shadow."

The pleasure and profit you get out of life will depend in large measure on ordinary people, and one who is unable to enjoy the kind of people that chance introduces is like the unfortunate guest who finds nothing but hash on the table and doesn't like hash.

Being bored is not a proof of superiority, as many suppose. It indicates nothing but lack of interest. And lack of interest often results from lack of ability to appreciate.

As it was said of one great man, that not to know him was to confess one's self unknown, so to be bored by certain people is a confession of stupidity.

One who knows nothing of music may be bored by the playing of a great violinist, and Einstein doubtless bores people who can't count above ten.

Another point to remember is that a brilliant player never does his best in competition with a child.

If a brilliant man finds himself in the company of a clod, he makes little effort to appear at his best. It takes both steel and flint to generate a spark. Finding the clod unresponsive, the brilliant one takes refuge in silence. And doubtless the clod is bored.

I don't mean to intimate that no man is always an inability to appreciate superiors. More often the opposite is true.

But the clod himself may be interesting to one who is blessed with intellectual curiosity. Even bugs are interesting to a scientific mind.

We are selfish by nature and prefer people who will entertain us without a corresponding effort on our part. But that kind of people don't waste their time on the dull. They also hate to be bored.

KING IS CREDITED

WITH AIDING SALE OF BRITISH ARMS

Washington was definitely under way here tonight.

Liberals in parliament, members of the House of Commons, indicated the move, and political sources indicated their belief that the labor and conservative parties might join in the demand.

Parliament reconvenes late in October and it was regarded as likely that action would be deferred until then.

The labor party was said to be seriously considering making the demand a question of important issue this fall.

The mention of Britain's ruler came abruptly during discussion of efforts by Britain and some rejuvenating works in the furnace room and call themselves new. This one is now the New Nelson House or the Old Nelson House. It is a very smart costume shoppe off the lobby.

In the sports department of the newspaper business, as is numbered as a house of woe and referred to as Hangover Hall. It is unlikely that any other hotel in the United States has ever housed as much anguish per cubic foot of content as the Nelson House, old and new, unless it could be the Mohican at New London, Conn., a regatta time in June of this year, which is a very busy time in the folds of these Rip Van Winkle hills, the suffering which goes on behind the impassive doors along the corridors is a very busy time in the folds of these

ACCIDENT RACKET CHARGED TO TWO

Q. T. and Sam Worthy Indicted in Operations of Alleged Ring.

Investigation of an alleged fake accident claim racket of wide proportions was begun Friday when Fulton county grand jury returned four indictments charging false swearing, the use of fictitious names to obtain money, and forgery, in connection with claims against Firestone Tire & Rubber Company, Black & White Cab Company and Tripod Paint Company.

The men named in the indictments are Q. T. Worthy and Sam Worthy, who are held in Fulton tower in default of $2,500 bond each.

According to the indictments two of the claims named were settled for $80 and $20, respectively.

Solicitor-General John A. Boykin said Friday that he will conduct a thorough probe of the alleged racket, and that he believed more than one ring is operating in the city. It was said that evidence already obtained tends to involve four lawyers and three doctors, and that other bills will be presented to the grand jury soon.

According to information furnished the solicitor-general, the alleged ring fakes an automobile accident by using false affidavits and false medical certificates. In some instances it was reported the alleged racketeers used sandpaper and paint remover to simulate abrasions.

It was said that the principal victims of the racket are the Georgia Power Company and the taxicab companies, who have about 200 cases under investigation. In many instances it was said that the faked claims have been settled, out of court, and that in others suits had actually been brought.

State Is Asked to Buy Land in 'Civic Center'

Max M. Cuba, chairman of the Atlanta municipal housing authority, Friday called on Governor Eugene Talmadge to purchase the remainder of the block at Trinity avenue and Washington streets, on which the highway and military buildings of the state now rest in furtherance of development of the civic center project being undertaken by the city and Fulton county.

"May I propose for your serious consideration that the state of Georgia, through your excellent leadership, purchase the remaining property on the block," Cuba's letter to the governor said.

He cited the fact that a portion of the block already is owned and occupied by the state, and that until the state needs the additional land for buildings, it could be devoted to a park site where open air meetings might be held.

Cuba is a councilman from the second ward and is one of the staunchest supporters of the civic center development. He called to Talmadge's attention the fact that Fulton county is now engaged in acquiring the remainder of the 'lock on which the courthouse rests, and that the aid of the state would add impetus to the drive for the undertaking.

COTTON GINNING TIE-UP RELIEVED BY NEW PLAN
The tie-up in cotton ginning throughout the state, due to the fact that the farmers have not yet received their exemption certificates from Washington, was relieved Friday when the internal revenue department approved a plan submitted to it by W. E. Page, Georgia collector.

This plan provides that the ginner may release half of the cotton to the farmer, retaining the other half, or may release all the cotton to the producer, placing it in a warehouse and retaining the receipt as security.

Cotton so released must bear a bale tag and the grower must be given a certificate of tagging in order that he may sell it. Mr. Page said the delay was due to the inability of the government printing office in Washington to supply the exemption certificates.

Jack Phillips, Star Fullback, Named Captain of Jackets

WILLIAMS GETS ALTERNATE POST FOR THIS SEASON

Jack Cannon, Line Coach, Reports To Aid in Practice.

By Jimmy Jones.

Jack Phillips, of Waynesville, N. C., fullback and outstanding star of Georgia Tech's 1933 football campaign, yesterday was elected captain of the Jackets for 1934 and Clyde (Pee Wee) Williams, veteran tackle of Little Rock, Ark., was named alternate captain.

Thirty-eight varsity men voted in the election, which was called immediately after practice by Coach W. A. Alexander. The boys huddled, did their balloting and the name of the big fullback was announced as "Pee Wee" Williams, veteran tackle of Little Rock, Ark., was named alternate captain.

Both selections met with the warm approval of teammates and coaches, for there are no more popular players at the Flats than Phillips and Williams. Both are rugged, durable men and hard fighters and both are seniors.

Two other extremely popular players, Clarence (Shorty) Roberts, of Atlanta, the pint-sized quarterback, and Dave Wilcox, the crack guard from Tyler, Texas, ran their close race in the balloting.

Following the election, there was a rush of congratulations for Phillips and Williams, the winners.

This was by far the biggest news of the Friday practice, but there was one other development that will vie very closely with the naming of the captain.

DR. CANNON ARRIVES.
It was the appearance of Dr. Jack Cannon, the husky line coach, who have into view along toward the shank of the afternoon after a four-day absence.

Dr. Cannon, who is very well liked by the boys, was greeted with loud huzzas from all sides as he sauntered through the gates in a light green suit and a straw hat. It was the last breath of summer that Dr. Cannon represented, for today he will get into the swing of the fall practice with the other coaches.

And while wreaths of smiles greeted Cannon, there was a look of great pain and suffering on that gentleman's face. He came in with one hand held to his jaw and working it gingerly.

A SICK MAN.
"I have been a sick man," he informed Coach Alexander who had begun to worry about his long-missing assistant. "Just look here."

And Dr. Cannon exhibited the cavity from which a sore wisdom tooth had just been extracted perforce by a Chicago dentist. Mr. Alexander had a look and decided that Cannon had been really having trouble with his molar. He gave him the name of an Atlanta dentist.

"I have had a good summer—a very good summer—outside of — teeth," Dr. Cannon stated, the last with a groan.

Some of the players who have been taking calisthenics under the foreign legion drill sergeant, Mr. Mike Chambers, were particularly glad to see Dr. Cannon put in an appearance. For he usually relieves Trainer Chambers of these duties.

And Mack Tarpe, who has been coaching a flock of linemen, shouted: HE'S HERE, ANYWAY.

"Get your hats, boys, here's Cannon!"

Well, Cannon is here and that is very good. For the doctor is quite a fellow.

The workout yesterday was not so hard as the others, but for Mike's calisthenics, which as usual, were of a very rigid nature. The usual program of work on fundamentals followed, but it was a little lighter than previous ones.

Mr. Alexander did not hint directly of a scrimmage, but his constituents are of the opinion that one is in the air. And that it may come sudden like—perhaps before next Wednesday, which he set tentatively as the date.

Friends Honor Stribling At Macon

MACON, Ga., Sept. 7.—(AP)—A host of intimate friends here tonight paid homage again to their fallen idol, W. L. Young Stribling, in dedicatory exercises presenting last Stribling gymnasium to the Macon Y. M. C. A.

About 300 persons attended the quiet, brief ceremony. Honor guests were "Pa" and "Ma" Stribling, Herbert "Baby" Stribling and Mrs. Clara Stribling, widow of the late boxer.

Mayor Herbert I. Smart presided at the exercises, first introducing Dr. W. R. Mackay who offered a spiritual tribute to "Stribling."

Robert M. Gamble, executive chairman of the Stribling Memorial Foundation, then made the formal presentation.

Afterwards the assembly adjourned to the gym room, wherein innumerable trophies and souvenirs presented by the beloved boxer were on display.

WEST END HOLDS TROPHY SHOOT

Leading skeet shooters of the city will gather Sunday at the West End Gun Club for the "Clark Gable trophy shoot." The trophy, which has been awarded by Gable, the well-known screen star and sportsman, is on display in the show windows of Myron E. Freeman & Bro.

The West End Gun Club is sponsoring the shoot in conjunction with Low's Grand theater. "Chained," now running at the Grand, features Gable and Joan Crawford. And in the picture Gable shoots skeet from the boat. He is one of the leading participants on the coast and is responsible for its popularity out there.

The "Gable trophy shoot" will be conducted on a handicap basis. Every shooter will receive a handicap. All scores of 30 or above will be considered ties and handicaps refuted for shoot-offs.

Second and third place winners will receive pairs of tickets for Gable's picture. Sunday's shoot will begin at 9 o'clock. Secretary C. L. Davis, who arranged the special event, will be in charge.

CAPITOL CLUB.
Capitol Gun Club will hold its regular Saturday afternoon shoot beginning at 2 o'clock today, and lasting all afternoon. Skeet and trap events are scheduled.

Arthur Cusack and several other out-of-town shooters are here for the events.

Cuccinello, Gabler Bought by Giants

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 7.—(AP)—James Hamilton, vice president of the Nashville Vols, today announced the sale of Frank Gabler, pitcher, and Al Cuccinello, second baseman, to the New York Giants for delivery next spring. Cuccinello is a brother of the Brooklyn Dodger infielder, Tony Cuccinello.

Gabler came to the Vols from Kansas City, of the American Association. Cuccinello came to the Southern Association team as a raw recruit from the Astoria, L. J., sandlots.

TOM PERKINSON, GEORGIA CENTER, WILL BE READY

Doctor Says His Injured Knee Will Be Okay for Season.

By Bill Ray.

ATHENS "Y" CAMP, TALLULAH FALLS, Ga., Sept. 7.—Tom Perkinson, the 220 pounds of center bulk from Marietta, will again don a Bulldog uniform this season after he had been generally conceded as lost to the varsity with an injured knee. Perkinson, wired Coach Harry Mehre at the mountain training camp today that Dr. Lawson Thornton, Atlanta specialist, had said that the knee would be okay to play on. His wire to Mehre was: "Saw Thornton, can play, arrive camp Sunday."

"I still doubt if that bum knee can be depended on," Coach Mehre stated after reading the telegram. If Perkinson can really take all the terrific punishment that a center must go through with Coach Mehre's center worries will be materially altered. John McKnight's slight weight of 175 pounds is at present the only veteran material although Roy Gatchell, tackle; Bob Law, end, have been shifted to get a try at the ball snapping.

SOS FOR COSTA.
Despite the wire Coach Mehre sent out a distress call to Athens to bring up "Flunk" Costa for the center work, while the team is conditioning here at the mountain training camp, Costa, Ted Vetter and Buddy Miller are really too light for the pivot post but they will have to handle the job while Gatchell, a Boys' High products, and Law are breaking in.

Julius Caesar Hall, heavy end candidate, was moved into tackle today.

Budge Beats Grant; Wood, Stoeften Win

Frank Shields Beats Lefty Bryan in Five Sets, 9-7, 3-6, 2-6, 6-2, 6-2.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 7.—Donald Budge, gangling young Oakland, Cal., star, today conquered Bryan M. (Bitty) Grant, of Atlanta, Ga., in a third round match in the men's national singles tennis championship. The scores were 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-8, 6-3.

Their match was interrupted by a downpour of rain late yesterday afternoon when the sets were two-all.

Budge, who is already being given consideration as a future Davis cup prospect, accounted for the No. 7 nationally ranked southern midget with his steady backhand. Budge served with a ferocity that resulted in several service aces.

Grant had no miracle shots left in his repertoire such as the sensational backhand placement he made from a horizontal position on the turf yesterday in the fourth set when he thwarted Budge from raising a match point.

STOEFTEN, WOOD WIN.
Lester R. Stoeften, of Los Angeles, and Sidney B. Wood Jr., of New York, members of the unsuccessful 1934 Davis cup team, gained the quarter final round.

Stoeften defeated John Van Ryn, of East Orange, N. J., 6-3, 6-3, 6-4. Wood accounted for Marcel Rainville, veteran Canadian internationalist in straight sets, 6-1, 6-4, 6-4.

For the fourth time since the tournament started last Saturday, rain interrupted the play and a temporary postponement was called just as Fred Perry, the British holder of the title, took the court against Edward W. Feibelman, of New York, in a fourth rounder.

Perry later won, 6-2, 6-1, 6-2. Play was resumed after half an hour and Frank N. Shields, top-seeded American, spotted Robert (Lefty) Bryan, of Signal Mountain, Tenn., a 2-1 lead in the first three sets and then turned on the pressure and fairly blasted the southpaw southerner off the court, winning by 9-7, 3-6, 2-6, 6-2, 6-2.

Roderich Menzel, the towering Czechoslovakian, playing in the championship for the first time, survived

WARNEKE BEATS GIANTS; BRUINS ROUT HUBBELL

Cubs Win, 4-2 and Reduce Leaders' Margin to 6 1-2 Games.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Lonnie Warneke, who has halted the Giants so often this season that it's almost become a habit, turned the trick today for the sixth time in seven attempts and the Cubs won the third game of the series, 4 to 2.

The victory didn't help Chicago's waning pennant hopes to any great extent as they had lost the first two games and were still eight games behind the pacesetters after today's count. As the St. Louis Cardinals were idle at Brooklyn, New York's margin was reduced to 6 1-2 games.

Rain, which fell through the greater part of the game, didn't seem to hamper Warneke's effectiveness as he won his 20th victory of the season. He yielded nine hits, most of them in the late innings, but was able to bear down in the tight spots and he walked only one.

Carl Hubbell, also seeking his 20th victory, starred for the Giants and met his downfall through Gabby Hartnett's 19th home run of the season. That blow was the third and last hit Hubbell gave but it followed a single by Riggs Stephenson in the fifth and gave the Cubs a 2-0 lead. Hubbell was removed for a pinch hitter in

Fred Sington Is Purchased By Washington

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 7.—(AP)—Fred Sington, slugging outfielder of the Albany Senators of the International league, has been sold to Washington of the American league for cash and three players, the club announced today. The amount of cash was not disclosed.

Sington, one-time All-American football player at Alabama, is third in home runs in the league with 20. His batting average is .253. He recently was voted the most popular Albany player.

Freddie Sington, who was sold to Washington yesterday by the Albany (N. Y.) club of the International league, was the property of the Atlanta Crackers for three seasons and played regularly as the club's left-fielder last year until he received an injury to a hand late in the season.

Sington batted only .262 in 106 games for the Crackers in 1933, but hit 12 home runs, 22 doubles, seven triples and drove in 69 runs. He was

ANKYRA FACES LAKEWOOD NINE

Excitement will be plentiful at Almand park this afternoon with Lakewood Criterion meeting Ankyra Class in the final game of the championship series of the Sunday School Amateur Athletic Association. The game starts at 3 o'clock.

In the two previous games of the playoff Lakewood and Ankyra have each a game to their credit. Lakewood took the first game, 2 to 1, and Ankyra was victorious in the second meeting, 6 to 1.

Lakewood will be handicapped by the loss of several of their star players but will be strengthened by the reappearance of Robert Foster and Smith, who were absent last week.

The entire lineup of Ankyra is intact. Dub Cooper will oppose Johnny Maher on the mound.

CITY LEAGUE.
The last series of games in the City league schedule are to be played Saturday afternoon. Two headliners are on the card, with Black & White Cab Company playing Standard Oil, and Southern Railway and Gaslight mixing in the other. The Cabman won last time by a two-run margin. Gaslight has a slight edge on the Railway team.

SCHEDULE.
Black & White vs. Standard Oil at North-west Piedmont; Barber and Hawkins, umpires.
Southern Railway vs. Gaslight at Grant park; Van Houten and Dowe, umpires.
Atlantic Steel vs. Port McPherson at Port McPherson; Bond and Young, umpires.

ATLANTA LEAGUE.
Atlanta Linn and Grinnell Company will play the second game of the final series in the Atlanta league on Saturday. The scene of the battle will be the Atlantic Steel plant at 1:30 p. m. Linn was the first game, 6 to 1, and a win this time would give them the championship. Atlanta Linn will probably pitch Little Tiny Osborne again this time.

CRATCHELLE LEAGUE.
Cratchelle won the championship of the Chattahoochee league with only one defeat for the second half but they will play Suwanee a game at Cratchelle Saturday afternoon just to decide which is the better team. Suwanee was one of the strongest teams in the league and it should be a good game.

BLUE RIDGE LEAGUE.
The Blue Ridge Mountain league is still operating and has games scheduled through September 22. All four of the games slated for this week are good contests.

SCHEDULE.
Jasper at N. Canton.
Milledgeville at Milledgeville.
Ducktown at Chattahoochee.
Copperhill at Marble.

Gehrig Hits 43d; Foxx Blasts 41st

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Lou Gehrig belted his forty-third home run of the season off Les Tipton's delivery in the second inning of today's game between the Yankees and the White Sox. The clout tied the score at 1-1 and again put Gehrig two up on Jimmie Foxx, of the Athletics, who hit his forty-first in the first game at Detroit.

COMMITTEES NAMED IN HOUSING CAMPAIGN

Six Chairmen Appointed To Complete Plans for City-Wide Drive.

Committees to direct the Atlanta Better Housing campaign were appointed at a meeting of the executive committee of the campaign Friday morning and the newly appointed chairmen were instructed to complete their committees and perfect all plans for the campaign which is designed to put back to work at least 3,000 of Atlanta's unemployed and to create $5,000,000 or more in reconditioning of private properties.

The following committees were named and the chairmen appointed were as follows:

Exposition committee, Ivan Allen, chairman. Will undertake, with the cooperation of the construction industry, to remodel a building to serve as an example of what can be done in the way of reconditioning properties.

Finance committee, D. C. Burham, chairman. Co-ordinating committee, R. C. Morrison, chairman. This committee will compile and make available all necessary information in regard to costs and prices of building materials.

Architects' and engineers' council, A. Ten Eyck Brown and S. R. Young, chairmen.

Zoning committee, R. W. Torres and Claude Grizzard, co-chairmen.

Speakers' bureau, Charles N. Walker, chairman.

The Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce will undertake a canvass of the business district.

Other committees and chairmen will be named. W. W. Winter, general campaign chairman, who presided, announced.

Members of the aldermanic board had their names added to the list of recipients of the small silver tea bells bearing the inscription, "The bells will soon be ringing." Friday afternoon, according to reports received.

Among those known to receive bells are Guy Coleman, J. Sid Tiller, John S. Scott, F. A. Mitchell, J. E. Bowden, Robert Carpenter, J. C. Aldredge, F. H. Reynolds, I. G. Haley, G. E. Millican, J. C. Murphy, E. A. Gilliam and Ellis R. Barrett.

All were puzzled over the meaning of the little symbol and cryptic message. "The bells will soon be ringing."

DELTA AIR LINES NAMES BERGSTROM TRAFFIC HEAD HERE

Oscar Bergstrom, for the last three years division air agent for the Western Union Telegraph Company, has been named traffic representative of the Delta Air Lines, it was announced Friday.

He will take over the newly created post on Monday, September 10, with offices in the lobby of the Ansley hotel.

In announcing his selection for the position, officials of the air line stated that he will handle matters relating to the new passenger rates which have just been placed in effect, giving the south the lowest air rates of any line in the United States.

Mr. Bergstrom is a native Atlantan, and resides at 942 Juniper street. He graduated at Georgia Tech in 1930, being awarded his B. C. S. degree at that time. Delta Air Lines operates a passenger, mail and express route from Charleston, S. C., to Dallas, Texas, via Atlanta.

C. OF C. BACKS MOVE
FOR NEW AUDITORIUM

Co-operation of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce in the drive for a new municipal auditorium was pledged to Mayor James L. Key Friday in a letter from Wiley L. Moore, president.

Key, who is attending a meeting of mayors in Brunswick, early next week will appoint a special commission authorized by council for the purpose of pushing the development. The number to be placed on the commission is not limited and the mayor is expected to select a large and influential group.

Federal aid probably will be sought in the undertaking and some means to finance the projected new structure must be evolved to make the attempt successful.

In his letter to Key, Moore points out that the present structure has served its usefulness, that it is no longer adequate to meet Atlanta's needs and that a new structure must be provided if Atlanta regains her prominence as the Convention City of the South.

He also praised Dr. Louis D. Newton, pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist church, who has taken the initiative along with Councilman John A. White and other members of the public buildings committee of council, in revival of the effort to obtain a new building.

POLICE COURT REVENUE SHOWS GAIN OF 62 PCT.

Receipts So Far This Year
Exceed Total for Entire Year of 1933.

"Business for the first eight months of this year is 62 per cent better than it was during the same period last year," Oscar M. Pendley announced Friday.

Mr. Pendley, it should be noted to keep from confusing Roger Babson, is secretary of the police committee and secretary to Chief T. O. Sturdivant. The business he refers to was that transacted by the Atlanta police department and consists of fines collected in the recorders' and "alibi" courts from violators of city ordinances.

Fines collected during the first eight months of this year not only far exceed those collected for the same period last year but exceed by $2,541.03 the amount of fines collected in the 12 months of 1933.

Each month, January through August, the fines collected this year have

Frances Dee, Joel McCrea Proud Parents of Boy

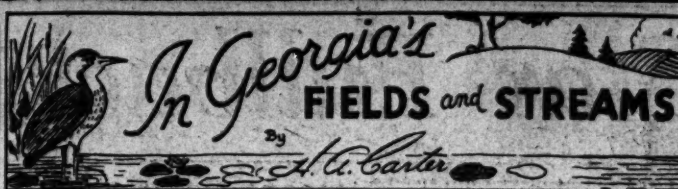

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 7.—(AP)—The colony of screen stars of the future, the babies of film families, registered a new member today, a seven-pound boy born to Frances Dee and Joel McCrea.

The elated father found the task of accepting congratulations so pressing he said he and Miss Dee had not decided upon a name.

exceeded those collected in the corresponding month in 1933. In March and April of this year the fines totaled more than twice what they did in the same months in 1933.

Mr. Pendley was unable to state just what the increase in income indicated unless it might be construed as meaning that more people were able to pay the fines assessed and fewer were forced to serve the sentences in the city stocks, which, he said, might be an indication of increased prosperity, particularly in view of the absence of figures which would show how many man-days were served in the stocks.

The total fines collected during the first eight months of 1933 were $78,142.90, while those collected during the first eight months of this year totaled $126,628.38, against a total of $123,997.35 collected during the entire year of 1933.

While we have been sailing along in this column for some time with a series of stories about the Georgia animals from fishes up to the reptiles, things have been happening in the field studies that deserve a bit of space. Since the amphibians and the reptiles are grouped together in one science by zoologists, I feel no hesitancy whatever in going back to the amphibians and telling you about a tremendous specimen of hellbender that was caught and sent to me by Tom Miller, of Blairsville.

Mr. Miller caught the animal and brought it to a friend of mine, George D. Walters Jr., to whom this survey of reptiles and amphibians owes more than a passing word of thanks. Walters communicated with me by phone, saying that he had a "salamander 18 inches long" which led to the immediate diagnosis of the species, once he mentioned the locality. The only other species comparable in length is the siren of the flood-fields of south Georgia, and this species is by no means as thick-bodied as the hellbender.

Really the beast was 18 inches long. In girth of body it was eight inches behind the forelegs and nine inches at the belly. You see from this that the species is really of considerable size. If I ever get one that isn't needed for a specimen, I intend to sample the flesh gastronomically, in the absence of its large Japanese cousin, Megalobatrachus japonicus, which is highly esteemed in the islands as an item of food. I believe that I mentioned something of this creature's habits before, so we will not dwell on them here. There are all too few records of the species in Georgia and we must all be on the lookout for them in mountainous regions. (Now that I have said that this fellow Walters is going to do his best to find them in Camden county.)

There have been some interesting reptiles caught. "Mickey" Whitten has brought in some splendid turtles recently. There were a number of Terrapins in the bunch, one yellow-bellied "cooter" (Pseudemys scripta) and a Sternotherus odoratus, the yellow-bellied terrapin being a new record for the herpetology of DeKalb county. His prize of the year is an 82-pound alligator snapper, measuring approximately three feet down the back of the shell. This brute has been very kindly promised to lend me for the reptile show. I'll bet right now that the thing steals the show even from the rattlers. He is just as dangerous, but in another way. He would be able, for instance, to amputate one's arm at the wrist with a single snap of his massive jaws.

TROLLEY-AUTO CRASH CLAIMS LIVES OF SIX

SEYMOUR, Conn., Sept. 7.—(AP)—Six men lost their lives here today in a head-on collision of an automobile and a Waterbury-New Haven trolley car near Palford's switch.

The victims of the tragedy, which occurred at 12:15 a. m., were all occupants of a small roadster. They were: Peter Paulik, 21, the driver; Salvatore Para, Angelo Garafalo, Ignace Palumbo and Ignatz Burblis, all of Ansonia; and Stanley Demerski, 18, of Seymour.

'QUAKE WREAKS HAVOC IN NORTHERN ALGERIA

ORLANSVILLE, Algeria, Sept. 7.—(AP)—A devastating earthquake scrambled a 20-mile area of northern Algeria during the night and drove thousands of terror-stricken inhabitants into the fields.

First reports said that several had been killed, but later survey indicated that the quick flight of the inhabitants from their homes had saved all but a few from injuries.

James T. Calhoun Honors Bridal Pair At Buffet Supper

James Trig Calhoun will be host at a buffet supper this evening at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Calhoun, on Pace's Ferry road, in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. William A. Ward Jr., who have recently returned from their wedding trip. Mrs. Ward was formerly Miss Clyde Partlow.

Mr. Calhoun will be assisted in entertaining by his mother, Mrs. Andrew Calhoun, and by his sister, Miss Louise Calhoun. The guests will include a small group of friends of the honor guests, and following the supper the group will attend the dinner-dance at the Piedmont Driving Club.

Guests will include Misses Marion Yundt, Sue Johnson, Nancy Kamper, Mr. and Mrs. William Nixon, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sturrah, Mr. and Mrs. Charles King, Mr. and Mrs. William Minnick, Mr. and Mrs. John Candler, Mr. and Mrs. James T. Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Woodruff, Mr. and Mrs. Malon Courts, Roy Evans, Dr. Kels Boland, Roby Robinson, Henry Miller and Seaborn Hawkins.

Mrs. DeGivie Honors Miss Betty Chambers

Mrs. Julius DeGivie was hostess at a dance last evening at her home on Wieuca road in honor of Miss Betty Chambers, attractive young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julian Chambers, who leaves today with her mother for Knoxville, Tenn., to join her father for future residence in Knoxville. The party which assembled 70 of the honor guest's friends, was a farewell compliment to this youthful belle, who was a popular member of the Freshman class at Washington Seminary last fall and will continue her school work this winter in Knoxville.

Mrs. Julian Chambers, mother of the honor guest, Mrs. Thomas Thorn Flagger, and Miss Margaret Bryan, Miss Chambers' dancing teacher, assisted in entertaining and a popular orchestra furnished music for the occasion. Pink roses and bunnies were effectively arranged to furnish the decorations for the long central table in the dining room where refreshments were served buffet, and the other appointments reflected the color notes of pink and green. Palms and ferns were banded in the solarium and various colored garden flowers were arranged throughout the house.

Mrs. Swann Fetes Miss Dorothy Turner.

Miss Dorothy Elizabeth Turner, a bride-elect of October, was honor guest on Friday at a luncheon given by her sister, Mrs. R. P. Swann, at the home of her mother, Mrs. Clyde L. Turner, on Lanier place, in Morristown. The entertainment is one of a series being planned in compliment to Miss Turner, who is numbered among the brides of the fall season.

Pink snapdragons combined with white dahlias, effectively arranged in a silver bowl centered the daintily appointed table. Covers were placed for eight close friends of the honor guest. Mrs. Turner assisted her daughter, Mrs. Swann, in entertaining.

TWO OR ACCIDENTS

Four persons were slightly injured in automobile accidents in Atlanta Friday. Three of the accidents were held to be unavoidable, while the fourth was attributed to a man operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor.

Rorene Thomason, 12, of 452 Whitehall terrace, was knocked from his bicycle and cut about the face and head when he ran his bicycle into an automobile at Oak street and West Whitehall street, operated by Mrs. T. J. Levereette. The boy, according to police reports, was looking back and swung from the right to the left of the street, hitting Mrs. Levereette's car.

W. R. Webb, of Corington, was slightly cut and bruised in a collision and one driven by R. D. Bates, 1304 Iverson street, N. E., Friday afternoon at Ponce de Leon avenue and Clifton road. He was treated at Grady hospital and dismissed. No case was made.

Howard Blankenship, of 625 Jones avenue, was arrested on a charge of driving while intoxicated after he hit an oil truck at Simpson and Vine streets. No case was made against W. A. Dobbs, of 451 Third street, N. W., driver of the oil truck.

An iron brace on the rear of a city sanitary truck tangled in the handlebars of his bicycle throwing him to the ground and fracturing his little finger, T. L. George, of 727 Capitol avenue, reported to police. The accident, he said, happened at Hunter and Butler streets.

ELKS' BIG FISH FRY TO BEGIN AT NOON;
BANDS WILL PLAY

Alderman James E. Bowden will signaling the beginning of the big public fish fry being given by Atlanta Lodge No. 78, B. P. O. Elks, at Grant park. The ladies of the Kle

Club will assist their "brother Elks" in feeding one of the biggest crowds ever assembled for an event of this kind.

Beginning at noon the Atlanta police band will furnish a musical program until about 3 o'clock, when they will be relieved by the band from the Atlanta fire department. Vocal interludes will be furnished by Ed Armstrong and Ed E. Smith, well-known Atlanta songsters, and a softball game consisting of two teams made up exclusively of Elks ought to furnish some side-splitting merriment. Horse-shoe pitching and other games will round out a well-balanced entertainment program throughout the afternoon. At 5:30 o'clock the quartet from the Atlanta theater will be on hand to delight the audience.

Charles G. Bruce, exalted ruler of the Atlanta Elks' lodge, is highly gratified at the advance ticket sale for this event. It promises to be one of the largest and most successful gatherings the Elks have sponsored in several years. Said Mr. Bruce, and the Elks' charity program will be greatly enlarged during the coming winter months.

fall term on Monday, a new department of sculpture under the supervision of Julian H. Harris, Atlanta sculptor, will be launched. There will day and night classes for special students who wish training only in sculpture. These classes also will be available for District 10 regular students of the school.

Julie Harris is a native Georgian, son of Joe H. Harris, of Carrollton. He is a graduate in architecture of the Georgia Institute of Technology, and has been associated with well known architectural firms in Atlanta and Philadelphia. He received his training in sculpture abroad and at the Philadelphia Museum of Art, Philadelphia, where he was a scholarship student his last two years. Last year Mr. Harris returned to Atlanta and opened his studio at 25th street, N.W. Among his most interesting work are:

are a bust of J. J. Haverty and the ten heads of famous scientists in stone on the dining hall arcade at Georgia Tech. He now is executing models of

His plans for the bronze gates which will be placed at the entrance of the new Armory building in Georgia include four panels of relief sculpture for the facade of the same building. Mr. Harris' work has been shown in professional exhibitions in New York, Philadelphia and Atlanta.

ANN STEPS OUT

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:

Ann's face colored. "Oh, I couldn't! You've done so much. I'd have been ashamed to ask you. There's always a girl in the office. There's always a great deal of filing to be done."

"She can take dictation, too."

"That's fine. Miss Wallace is failing. She's a lot slower than I am. I'm going to pencil her books. One of the other girls will be promoted to be secretary to Mr. Lord, and there will be a vacancy for another stenographer. Until then your sister can be promoted to be the word."

"I've said, 'thank you' so much that it no longer sounds as though I'm grateful. But I am."

"Send her in tomorrow morning."

She looked down at her hands and then at her sister. "I'll go to see Doug and the times they had had together flashed through her mind. Doug in a serious mood saying, "Miss m. Ann. One more kiss tonight. One of these days I won't have to say 'good night. Good night!' Now it was good-bye."

"All right," Doug? asked Nick.

"Yes. Can't stop thinking."

He wished there were something he could say to her. There was an absence, this was hurting more than she showed. She looked lovely, he thought, in her filmy blue dress with the gardenias he had sent pinned on her shoulders. He thought that her slim hands trembled a little. He saw her clasping them tightly together.

There was a general celebration that evening at dinner when Jean learned she had a position. Dick's face lit up.

"Mr. Hamill certainly is a kind man," said Mr. Dryden.

"I don't like office work very much," said Ann.

"It's the only thing I can do." She smiled impudently in Ann's direction. "Until somebody in the family marries for money."

"There you go again," said Mrs. Dryden, "talking as if money's the only thing in the world. I should like to see that happen. You'd be happy to get a job in the same office with Ann."

When Doug appeared at the altar with his attendant, Nick took her hand and looked between his palms.

It was the first time Nick and Doug for weeks and she had a feeling that she was going to cry here in the presence of Nick, Dick, her and every one knowing "She" better. She thought, "There he is—handsome than I remember his ever being—his hair going gray—his back from his forehead, . . . tanned. He looks supremely confident. He is never nervous. . . . familiar. . . . I remember the wedding march and the doors in the back of the church opened. Ann looked her head to see Gail and he lifted his head."

“I won’t have to wait! Ann’s clothes are in the trunk, and I’ll help out the family finances a little.”

Dick said, “I know what you’re talking about. I’ve had my share of business dealings with Mr. Hamill. He says he’s a very fine man and very wealthy. He hasn’t made it all the way, but the advertising business it was in was a failure. The Hamills have always had money.”

“I think it’s funny,” said Mrs. Deane, “the two brothers don’t live together.”

She wasn’t thinking of how beautiful Gail looked and the proud, poised manner in which she carried herself. She was thinking of Doug. She was thinking of how everybody was looking at her and thought how beautiful she was. She was thinking of how she would be the most discussed one of the season.

The strong hand still held Ann’s. She looked at him for reassurance. Slowly, to the strains of the music, Gail walked down the aisle. She gave a little nod to the girls.

"They've got a mother and an old maid sister living in Roland Park," said Dick. "They're pretty good people. The old lady's got an invalid and the sister lost the man she was engaged to in the war. They're very nice people."

"John's mother and sister! Ann had heard of them but she had never given them a thought. What would she have thought of marrying his family, a poor girl from a middle-class family? Aristocrats!"

Ann did not hear what the clergyman said. Her mind was struggling with her own perturbed thoughts. She had not believed that this could be true. It couldn't be—yet it was happening. How could it be? How could it be so beautiful, so perfect, so beautiful, so beautiful. It was as though all those girlish dreams came tumbling down to earth with Gail and Doug standing there before her, close together.

"There's the telephone," said Leah. "It's probably one of the Hamilla people who are still looking for important people with the Hamilla calling." "An went upstairs to answer the telephone. "It's Nick," said the drawing casual voice. "A bad penny turned up. But I've got to be brief because I'm in a hurry. Lot of peo-

It was over in a short time. Nick released her hand and held her coat for her. The bridal party passed out through the church. Al and Jess—man and wife. People about the couple whispering what a handsome couple they were and what a brilliant match it was.

Nick said, "Let's get out of here."

"It's nice to hear from you, if only for a minute," said Nfck.

"Yes. I just wanted to tell you that I'm coming to Baltimore Friday morning. I got an invitation to the wedding. I'm coming, and you sent it. I'm coming," said Nfck. "To take you and after the wedding I have a surprise!"

The room was beautifully decorated. Most of the guests were there when Ann arrived and walked down the aisle.

Nick put his foot on the starter. "You're not keen about going to this reception, are you?" Ann pulled the collar of her coat around her chin.

"No. But it's one of those things one must do—to be gallant."

did not see Ann; she wondered what they would think if they saw her with Nick Hamill. The aristocratic-looking gentleman Nick pointed out was Gail's father. Her mother was dead. Ann felt that Nick had come to see her through this thing. It would have been a disaster if she had not been here along with him. She waited until the wedding march started, which would bring Doug and Gail to the altar, and unite them forever. CARL went into several blocks around the Tracy home. He was looking for the most obscure from the main street by thick shrubbery and high trees. "Prepare yourself for a lot of overreversed horses," said Nick. "They're your kind. Society people. I mean, they're not mine. People the house was seething with people. They nodded to Nick Hamill

"You look lovely," said Nick, "in your blue dress."
"And my borrowed coat," whispered Ann, smiling.
"I wish this were over. Lot of people here just for what they can see."
"I wouldn't have a wedding like this," said Ann. "I want to be married."

acted very quietly. And go away at once. No people. No fuss. Just the matter of it, wouldn't you go to Europe either. I'd want to go to a mountain lodge or some place like that on my honeymoon."

"I've always had the same idea myself," said Nick. "I think getting married is a very personal affair. I

"Let's pay our compliments and duck," said Nick.

When they approached the bride and groom, Gail said, "Oh, Nick! How sweet of you to come. Do have a drink." Then she turned to Ann, "This is Miss Dryden, isn't it?"

Atlanta spot cotton closed steady, 5 points down at 13.15.
Receipts 13,000 bales; shipments 615; stocks 168,775.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—(AP)—With business restricted pending the government crcp report tomorrow and nervousness over the textile strike situation, cotton prices moved narrowly today.

Prices held fairly steady during the morning but fell off sharply after late trading under some liquidation and southern hedging. December contracts sold from 13.35 to 13.26, closed at that figure.

The market was steady at net declines of 4 to 7 points.

Early in the session southern selling was negligible, buyers were un-

TARZAN AND THE CITY OF GOLD No. 144

When the captain instructed Tarzan that he must turn down the Avenue of Death until he was overtaken by the lion, the ape-man asked: "What if I should elude the lion and escape—should I have my freedom then?" Phoros said sadly: "You will not escape Belthar!"

With military precision, Phoros turned then to the Queen and knelt. "All is in readiness, your majesty," he said. "Shall the hunt begin?" Nemone looked quickly about her. She saw the guards so disposed that she would be protected if the raging lion should turn back.

She saw that her slaves carried great nets with which Belthar was to be recaptured after he had killed Tarzan. She knew, and they knew, that not all of the slaves would return alive to the City of Gold, but that would add to the interest and excitement of the day.

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

The Queen nodded. "Let the lion scent the quarry once more; then the hunt may begin," she directed. The keepers, aided by a dozen additional men, let Belthar move a little closer. Alone, unarmed, against overwhelming odds, Tarzan awaited his battle with death!
